

Study In Costa Rica

ANTR 3905 E -Independent Studies
Costa Rica Field Course

Key Areas of Focus

- Studies on the local use and sustainable use of natural resources
- Primatological research
- Poaching and conservation management
- Marine turtle nesting and community conservation

Earn credit conducting Applied Anthropological field work. Investigate conservation issues facing marine and terrestrial mammals from the biocultural perspective in Central America and throughout the world.

Students will be stationed at the Caño Palma Biological Station (CPBS) - located at the southern tip of a large national wildlife refuge.

June 14- July 5, 2010

3 week course

6 credits

$1,200 + Airfare

For More Information Please Contact:

Dr. Kymberly Snarr - ksnarr@georgianc.on.ca
Laurentian University, Anthropology Department
<http://anthropology.laurentian.ca>

Learning. It's in our Nature.